FLOATING HOSPITALS. gas Into a Big Storm Coming Back From Staten Island, but the Little Ones Didn't Mind-Two Nurses for Each Child-Scenes at Seaside Hospitals -Season's Schedule

Forty-seven tenement house babies and their mothers had the time of their lives yesterday when they sailed about the bay their number of nurses, doctors and matrons at their command. They were prevented when they went out by the fact that they were under the weather more or less. They were heat victims. They came home attended all the way by a display of aerial freworks that beat the Fourth all hollow, a running salute to the first excursion of the second quarter century of St. John's

Guild's floating hospital.

The heat had hurried up the excursion. Properly the floating hospital service should have begun next Monday, when the Health Department's summer doctors go to work by the tenements; but the trustees of the wait a minute longer than necessary and burriedly put the boats into commission. Perhaps it was because the faet had not beome properly known one dares to hope at least that it may also be possible that there are not so many little babies in the tene-ments as the recollection of the torrid weather made everybody fear—that the forty-seven had it all to themselves. The two boats, the Emma Abbott and the Helen C. Juilliard came down: the Abbott from beyond Hell's Kitchen on the North River, the Julliard from East Twenty-fourth street, with two nurses and a white-robed one at which the little ones gazed in rapt admiration. slyly feeling the hem of her radiant garment when the the hem of her radiant garment when the apparition had its back turned. It was a personally conducted excursion at that Secretary John P. Faure's flag was heisted upon the pilot house of the Emma Abbott. With his green umbrella he pointed the way to the Seaside Hospital, piloting the beats around the Staten Island shore. A grateful breeze came in through the Narrows and sissed the wan cheeks with its salt breath. Before Quarantine was passed the Third street baby that was teething and stricken with summer cholera was fast asleep in its happy mother's arms. Off Midland Beach he was tumbling over the benches that are cunningly devised life-rafts for an emergency. When the launch took Mr. Faure and his party ashore the last they heard from the Emma Abbott was the sound of the Third streeter's spoon hammering on the dining-room table in loud demand for 'more.' The gentle German mother from West Forty-eighth street, who had come aboard with three little ones, one fretful and sick, beamed at them from over the rail and gently raised her arms with their burden: the little one was peacefully asleep.

The first death had occurred the night before in the Seaside Hospital, but there were 307 left, not one of whom would the doctors give up. They had been sent down by the doctors who practise in the tenement house districts, some of them aimost too late. They followed the visitors from their swinging cribs with great, sorrowful eyes that wrung the hearts of the women and at least one of the men until he went out and got on the verandah and saw the stouter youngsters splashing in the surf as if in a distant mist while he thought of his own little ones as a thome. Then the launch whistled that the home journey was to begin and they went back on board to see the children be bathed 'in seven languages." But there were only three tongues in use yesterday.

With them came another score of bables and their mothers whom Policeman Eldritch had found awaiting the boat on the pier at the foot of East 112th street. The boat did not sto

Alderman Delano's Name Appears in List of Officers - He Says He's Out. When the Comptroller discovered recently in the list of officers of the Milton Rathburn Company, which was the lowest bidder for supplying the city with hay and other horse forage, that the name of Alderman W. H. C. Delano appeared as Secretary and Treasurer he wrote to Corporation Counsel Whalen for advice. The contract had already been awarded to the Milton Rathbun Company. Mr. Whalen wrote to the Comptroller that if he approved the sureties the consequences but also for the President of the corporation, who verified the bid, one of the sworn statements whereof is that no member of the Municipal Assembly is interested in the bid decided to submit bids. He said he had not ry and Treasurer since June 13, been its secretary and Treasurer since June 13, and that the fact of his resignation had been recorded on the minutes of the company. That was two weeks before the bid was aurmitted Asked if he was still connected with the company. Mr. Delano said:

Not as a stockholder. I am now only an employee, but that will not invalidate the contract. I don't see why all this fuss is being made over it, anyway. I could bring serious charges against some one if I wanted. The man who has had the contract for twelve years and who chairly get it this year had better keep quiet, as he will find that to his advantage, financially and legally. He is the man who is making all this trouble.

The contracter who has had the contract for the last twelve years was John J. Lenane, a hay and feed man. It was learned that the Department of Street Cleaning had been dissatisfied with the quality of the feed furnished by Lenane, who his so low year after year that no one size had any show to get the contract. It was complained that the No. I oats called for were often filled with chips.

DEBS LETS LOOSE GENERALLY.

CRICAGO, July 5. - Eugene V. Debs deounced the American flag, hurled abuse at the Supreme Court and railed at all forms of constituted government in his Fourth of July celebration in Hoerdt's Grove. There were about 200 Social-Democrats present, and Debs was the speaker of the day. He talked for over two hours, and at each fresh outbreak against the established order of things was lustly cheered by his listeners.

"Thousands of orators all over the land," said Debs, "will to-day glorify the institutions and the flag under which we live, but I am not one of these. I am not a flag worshipper. I have no respect for the Stars and Stripes or any other flag that symbolizes slavery. President McKinley in mock-herole has asked. Who will pull down that flag?
I answer in behalf of my party, the SocialDemocrats, that we will pull it down.

"The Constitution of the United States was founded in iniquity. Our much vaunted equality is only a myth. The rights of the laboring people had no consideration in the drafting of that document. The equality which was expressed therein was meant only for those who took part in constructing that wonderful Constitution. The Supreme Court of this country is nothing more than a convenience of the rich. Every Judge who sits on the Supreme Bench to-day is a tool of capitalists. Let any laboring man attempt to get justice there, and he will learn the difficulty of reaching that high tribunal." aid Debs, "will to-day glorify the institu-

The Liederkranz came here in 1885 and gave a benefit for the burned Music Hall. and came again in 1893. A concert of German music was held in the Temple of Music at 4 o'clock this afternoon. Mme. Lilian Blauvelt sang a solo: Miss Olive Mead, the violinist, played a fantasia, and Carl Schlegel's baritone voice was heard in several pieces in which he had the assistance of a stlendid male chorus. Mrs. Fannie Richter Fuchs on the plano, Mme. Blauvelt and Miss Mead in a duet, and folk songs by the male chorus were features of an artistic programme. To-night the Liedersranz gave a kommers and summer night's festival on the roof garden of the Hotel Lennex, which is their headquarters. Three hundred Buffalonians were invited.

quarters. Three hundred Bundronau invited.

The 2,500 schoolteachers, who are in convention here, made a showing on the fair grounds to-day, but they didn't have as much to say as the 150 teachers of deaf mutes, who are also in annual session here. Ameng the deaf mutes teachers is Dr. Gallaudet, rector of St. Ann's Church, New York. Along with these two conventions Buffalo is entertaining the Eastern Puzzlers' League, to whom the crystal maze of the Midway is an open door.

of 1,000 feet, inclosed in a cannon, landing in Muskegon Lake. Death was instantaneous. Tezelow was the assistant of "Prof." Meirell of Grand Rapids, who was engaged to make two ascensions here. Tezelow had made only one ascension before to-day, that being in Cedar Springs last Tuesday. He begged to be permitted to go up here and Moixell consented. Tezelow was to be shot out of a cannon when he had risen to a certain heigh. He was inclosed in the cannon with a parachute. When the balloon had trisen 1,000 feet the rope holding the cannon coaught fire, letting it fall. The balloonist in the metal cannon plunged into Muskegon Lake.
